GLOBAL CONFERENCE ON SUSTAINABILITY IN HIGHER EDUCATION

Theme: The Urgency of Now

Streaming Live Oct. 18, Oct. 26 and Nov. 3, 2022!

"Being a host institution was a tremendous opportunity for our campus. We were able to engage more of our employees and students in professional-level sustainability discussions than ever before. Plus, the breadth of presentations--and the focus on equity--helped our community understand that sustainability is about so much more than stewarding the environment."

- Casey Meehan, Ph.D. Western Technical College, La Crosse, Wisconsin

AASHE invites your institution to join the community as we explore, reexamine and re-envision sustainability in higher education. Become a Host Institution today and engage your entire campus in these critical discussions centered around this year's theme, "The Urgency of Now."

Host Institution sponsorships, available to AASHE members only, provide campuses with a large number of conference registration passes (either 100 or unlimited), as well as unique opportunities to be recognized for their commitment to sustainability. Together we can equip campus change agents with the tools they need to lead the global sustainability transformation.

#GCSHE Theme

In 2021, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) released a major report indicating that immediate, rapid and large-scale reductions in greenhouse gas emissions are necessary to avoid catastrophic climate change. Despite this unequivocal and urgent warning from the world's leading climate scientists and even as the dire consequences of climate change become ever more apparent, especially for the most vulnerable communities, many institutions and organizations seem mired in gradualism. With a theme of "The Urgency of Now," this year's Global Conference on Sustainability in Higher Education (GCSHE) is a clarion call for transformative sustainability solutions that match the speed and scale of the challenges we face. Are you committed to urgent change at your institution and beyond? Join us at GSCHE!
